The Art of Silversmithing

If STEFANO RICCI's jewelry reflects the splendour of the golden age, his trays, cups and chargers evoke a more understated yet equally regal silver age, where opulence softens only to frame the true protagonists of the table: food, tannins, and conviviality.

Since 1993, Florence's finest silversmiths have worked alongside the Maison's silk artisans and goldsmiths. And since 2010, within the brand's new headquarters in Fiesole Caldine, they have practised techniques that descend directly from the craftsmanship of Benvenuto Cellini.

Among these is sbalzo (embossment), where the artisan hammers a metal sheet placed on a bed of pitch, giving three-dimensionality to the hand-drawn design before proceeding to the delicate art of cesello (chiselled) finishing. Another technique is bottellatura (hammering), in which a heated iron rod with a rounded tip is secured to a lathe and expertly hammered to create the indentations that define the beauty of STEFANO RICCI silverware, especially the pieces adorned with grapevine motifs.

These are meticulous processes where haste has no place: it is not uncommon for a single tray to take a month to complete. After all, as with all artisanal crafts in SR creations, passion is what makes the difference. The in-house silverware collection was created to satisfy the desires of clients who already have everything. And Mr. Ricci takes pride in a gift his artisans created for him, a silver cup fit for a king.

STEFANO RICCI

- BRONZE LINE -

Sculpted Bronze

The SR Bronze Line is more than a collection; it is a profound homage to the ancient art of lost-wax casting. Each unique animal figure begins its life as a collaborative vision shared between Florentine designer STEFANO RICCI and his master artisans.

Rooted in the Florentine tradition of bronze casting, this process echoes a heritage that dates back to the Renaissance, when master sculptors transformed metal into enduring works of art. Florence has long been a cradle of sculptural excellence, where technique and artistry converge, and this lineage continues within each SR bronze creation.

The animal figures themselves are inspired by wildlife from around the world, each embodying strength, nobility, and freedom. They are tributes to the wilderness, interpreted through the brand's lens of refinement and majesty.

The journey starts with the hands, with a clay model sculpted to perfection before being encased in a complex system of rubber and plaster. Molten wax is then delicately brushed into the mould, allowing for a phase of meticulous hand-retouching where the sculpture's "soul" is poured into every curve.

Then comes the fire. The wax is encased in a secret porcelain mixture and fired until it evaporates, leaving behind a "perfect void." Into this hollow, the finest 9010 bronze alloy is poured, the vessels buried deep in the earth to contain the searing heat. What emerges from the shattered porcelain is raw and formidable, requiring a rigorous transformation of sandblasting, welding, and hand-chiselling. Finally, a historic "liver of sulphur" patina is applied, buffed with wool to a soft, storied lustre. These are not merely objects, they are masterpieces forged from fire and heritage.
